Know your style

Shutters work well in all types of property from period to modern. The style you choose depends on the type of window you have and the ‘job’ you want the shutter to do

Full height

A flexible and popular style, these are single full height panels that cover the whole window. It's a simple yet elegant style that works on any window but gives a real wow factor and dramatic finish to patio doors or tall windows. Quite often full height shutters will have a divider rail. As well as giving support to the panels, it also allows you to operate the louvres above and below it independently so you can adjust the light according to your needs and create different looks.

Tier-on-tier

This is perhaps the most versatile option as you basically have two sets of shutters, one on top of the other, each operating independently of each other. So you can have the top open to make the most of a pretty view, and the bottom closed for privacy or of course vice versa. This type of shutter works particularly well in bedrooms where privacy is always going to be a priority.

Cafe style

This is a stylish and cost effective solution as you're only putting shutters partway up the height of the windows. This creates privacy at the lower level and allows plenty of light to flood through the top of the window. This gives a lovely continental feel that looks great in kitchens and living areas.

Tracked

Create a stunning room divider or cover large windows and doors with a folding tracked option. This works well when you want to pull the shutters back to enjoy a lovely view or get easy access through a patio door.

Solid

Traditional, solid wood panels that are particularly suited to period properties with draughty windows as they give great insulation and privacy.

Louvre size depends on the size of the window and the effect you want to achieve. As a general rule, wider louvres work better on larger windows as they let in more light and smaller louvre sizes offer greater privacy.

Grovewood Latte

Known as a mid or divider rail, this is needed to support taller shutters. It also allows the shutter to be split into two parts so the top section can operate independently of the bottom.

This is perfect in a bay window or a room where you might want the option of having more control over light and privacy.

Divider rails can also be offset to complement the architecture of the window.

Shutters help in the quest for a fresh, uncluttered look. They sit sleekly against the window and like curtains, keep out the cold on dark winter nights. But unlike soft furnishings, and as long as they're regularly dusted, won't harbour a dynasty of dust mites. Perfect for allergy sufferers.

Classic Pearl

Bay windows are a lovely feature but can be awkward to dress. Shutters are a great solution as they fit snugly into the recesses and give a fabulous sleek look that really draws attention to the window. And as well as filtering the light and maintaining privacy, shutters can also help reduce noise - ideal if you live in an urban environment.
